SECOND COLD WAVE

Snow Prozen Hard and People Move About Canilously.

A scond cold wave, which was promised to continue through to-day, descended upon Richmond yenterday. The clush, which began to form shortly after the sun was well up on the horizon, from the snow of the previous two days, was frozen, converting the streets into ice, which made them almost impassable to any kind of traffic.

traffic.
Horses and mules drawing vehicles were constantly failing upon the slippery surfaces, while pedestrians fared little hetter.

All day the temperature remained below the freezing peinl, the highest being recorded about 5 P. M., when it was 31. At 3 o'clock it had fallen to 27.

Forecaster Evans said that the cold weather will continue through to-day, with gradually moderating temperatury after suprise. Fair and clear is also predicted, and it is expected that the backbone of the gold wave will be broken.

The capture of the outfit occurred yeserday morning in the Seven Pines Road, following an exciting chase by reserve officers.

Road. following an exciting chase by revenue officers.

Early in the day Deputy Collector O. H. Starbuck and Special Gauger B. F. Atkins, in a burgy, began a round of inspection of distilleries in Henrico county. When they approached the Stony Creek Distillery, owned by V. Denati, a wagon, driven by a negro boy, was seen to leave the place, and, instead of pursuing the usual route to the Mechanicsville Turnpike, was heading for the Seven Pines Read.

Confident that something was wrong, the officers turned back and speeded for the Seven Pines Road to head off the wagon. But when they reached that highway they discovered that the wagon had beaten them to it, and was in the lead.

A hot pursuit started, but the wagon continued far in advance, when it suddenly turned into a farmyard and stopped. The boy jumped from the wagon and with an axe attempted to cut the barrel, which he had thrown out, to permit the liquor to flow out. He struck one blow, then dropped the axe and ran. The officers arrived on the scene and found the big cask hacked, but not sufficiently to spring a leak.

But in the snow the tracks of the wagon were plainly seen leading from the distillery, and the tracks of the boy who ran led in the direction of the distillery, but were lost when they reached the road.

Colonel Chapman and Collector M. K. Lowry were notified by Officers Starbuck and Atkins of the affair, and with Deputy Collector Carter, they at once went to the distillery for the ourpose of making an investigation. with Deputy Collector Carter, they at once went to the distillery for the purpose of making an investigation. The horse and wagon were brought into the city and remained for some time at the Federal building, when they were sent to a stable and the whiskey to the warehouse.

In the vernacular of the revenue department, the barrel was "baldheaded"—meaning minus a revenue stamp.

Carrington Matter.

Six pages are devoted to the Carrington episode. The correspondence between the board and the former surgeon, in which the latter was invited to give details in regard to his charges of cruelty and improper in fluence exerted by the shoe company, is reproduced. Reports of previous years made by Dr. Carrington to the boards are given, in which he commended the sort of punishment administered and approved the administrations of the boards and superintendents.

"We do not hesitate," says the report, "to say that there is no such thing as cruelty in connection with the penitentiary. We are in close touch with the superintendent, and our investigation, the prisoner being present at the investigation."

It is further stated that it is impossible for the shoe company to have anything whatever to do with any sort of punishment which could affect the parole of a convict.

The board is especially pleased with many improvements installed a; the State Farm.

Automobile Engine Forced Out Congressman Saunders Counsel of Course, It Is Alleged, by Street Cars.

A leaking gas pipe in the cellar of the store of J. L. Lindsay, 1321 East of the Fifth Virginia District, argued Main Street, burst into dame at 10:20 in the first case heard by the Suprema o'clock last night and caused much ex-citement. An alarm was turned in, and several engine companies were ordered to the scene, as the store is in one of the most dangerous fire districts in the

to the scene, as the store is in one of the most dangerous fire districts in the city.

The automobile engine from Third Street was one of the first called out. Taking a course east on Main Street, the giant engine was stopped, it is alleged, at Tenth and Main by two sirect cars, one going east, the other westward. To avoid colliding with the pile of brick and stone in front of the new post-office, now in course of crection, and with one of the street cars, the automobile eengine was forced to turn north on Tenth Street. In order to change its course, the engine was made to take the left side of the street, and there was some criticism because of the fact that the fire engine diverged from the traffic regulations. As a matter of fact, however, all fire apparatus has right of way over everything else, life and property being involved; and in this particular instance it is said that the street cars falled to heed the warning gong of the ongine and did not give it right of way.

The fire resulted in no damage what seever, and the flames were extinguished with the blast of a fireman's helmet. But, as the alarm came from one of the dangerous districts, several engines were called into play, and, under the direction of Chiefs Joynes and might have started.

PROTECT HORSES IN COLD

The annual meeting of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals will be held on January 36 at the Jefferson listel. This was decided at a meeting held last night at the Jefferson listel. The present cold wave lead to a discussion of the hardanips to which horses and mules are subjected. It was decided that a notice be published asking all owners and drivers to see that their animals are properly blankeded and cared for, that loads be reduced and teams doubled.

The slippery condition of the streets have made them almost impossible for teams to pass, especially on the hills, where horses were frequently falling under the strain of the loads they were drawing, augmented by the condition of the prevenents.
